Yes, Money Is Power
Why Play Golf?
To Women, Life Is Earnest
Questions in Morals

— By Arthur Brisbane —

Copyright, 1921

Samuel Untermyer, able lawyer, deserves credit for recent public service. He gives up a district fine prosecution of criminals in the building trade. Their kind of stealing discourages building and deprives the people of houses. But, for some reason, the judges punish such wholesale, dangerous crime with fines—never with imprisonment. Mr. Untermyer says: "The most dangerous criminals are above and beyond the law."

It is a fact that money is a great temptation in this country. Perhaps when that is proved to the people they will do something about it. More probably not.

The English beat the Americans playing golf, eliminated them all. Do not weep. If Americans are to be beaten at any game, let it be golf. You feel about an American playing golf as Dr. Johnson felt about a woman preaching. He was not surprised that she did not do it well; he wondered that she did it at all. So with Americans, you wonder that they play golf at all.

How a man energetic and nervous can hit a little white ball with a properly-shaped club then walk a hundred or two hundred yards to hit it again, in perfectly aimless pursuit, especially as there is real work to be done.

Four girls, between thirteen and fourteen, to kill themselves because school was too much for them. Only one succeeded. That should interest the schools. Education should not be repulsive or school research painful. It is certainly unfortunate that children are driven to suicide by fear of failure at examinations.

Women and girls kill themselves more readily, on less provocation, than men.

Two children, past thirty, did unsuccessful, killed themselves, saying, "Life is too hard."

A most intelligent, pleasing young woman professor at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., did. Concentration at astronomy, she reached the conclusion that the stars are too big and human beings too little. Her favorite quotation from Tennyson was:

"What is it all but the trouble of ants
In the light of a million, million of years?"

Does Jordan and Amara Hawkeswell, Episcopalian New York school girls, think that the sexes are not educated to each others' arms? They had written on the walls: "Love is the cause of all people's death. Tell your lover and mine that we have been dead."

Suicide and crank correspondent American boys will wonder what it was all about and feel quite justified in thinking that girls take their troubles heavily, too. Likely.

At Anderson, Ind., Mr. and Mrs. Marcus and Mr. and Mrs. Hull-man appeared before a judge. They explained that they were in search of families with Mrs. Muncey had decided that she wanted to marry Mr. Hullman, and Mr. Muncey wished to marry Mr. Hullman's wife. Would the judge please help?

The judge couldn't. So the two wives filed abandonment suits and home to fix it that way.

It is admirable that human nature should change their minds. But which would be better for the community's morals, to see them do it together, legally but not really, or allow them to separate and remarry?

I. W. Wallace, secretary of the American Engineering Council, left Chicago that "every time there is a strike in women's fashions it costs the country millions of dollars."

Extravagance slightly, he thinks the slightest change in fashion persuades women to throw away their hats and clothes and buy new. No doubt many millions are spent unnecessarily because fashions change; also, no doubt, there is a reason for it.

Woman is gradually finding her place in the universe, through a process of evolution in fashion.

First evolution made us stand up straight, with our front feet off the ground. Then it developed out of the fur that covered our body, making us entirely naked, as we gradually got used to clothes.

And now we are deciding, slowly, through the centuries, what kind of clothes we ought to wear. And women do the work of deciding.

What the engineers criticise is a part of evolution, a movement as irresistible as that of the glaciers. It means nothing to an engineer, when a woman's skirt becomes higher or her corsage lower.

But there is a cosmic meaning to it, a struggling for equilibrium between the outer and the inner woman. That equilibrium must be found, no matter how much it costs.

REWARD IN WHITNEY SEARCH

County Solicitor Offers $500 in Effort to Find Woman Long Missing

Claremont, N. H., May 27.—Another attempt to solve the five years' mystery surrounding the disappearance of Mrs. Harriette Wright Whitney of Langdon was made today when a reward of $500 was offered for information concerning her whereabouts.

Franklin D. Raymond, aged twenty-seven, of No. 8 Quincy place, Roxbury, confronted in his home by his second wife and by Mary Elizabeth McIntyre, a comely girl whom he met in Fleshburg Park and married after a whirlwind courtship, fled the house and vanished.

Mrs. Whitney was last seen at an entertainment at the Langdon Town House, which she attended to have returned home with her husband. According to the police, Mrs. Whitney left her husband, William B. Whitney, and disappeared from their home soon after. The theory of foul play resulted in an official investigation being started by the then county solicitor without result.

To Solve Mystery of Highest Peak

By COLONEL HOWARD BURY.
Leader of Mount Everest Expedition.

Special Cable Dispatch Arranged and Accepted by the Mount Everest Committee

The two women promptly went to the office of District Attorney Pelletier and made complaint. The authorities are seeking Raymond.

Mrs. Raymond No. 2 told to the police that Raymond was married to his first wife in a Boston church, October 3, 1911. He has two children, aged six and two years, by his first wife.

Newcomb, Seeking Accounting, Says Ex-Treasurer Threatened to Punch Him

Bridgeport, Ct., May 27.—A dramatic tinge was added to the trial of Mrs. Ethel Hutchins Nott, on trial for the murder of her husband, today when Sheriff Pease put his right hand toward his hip pocket and threatened to shoot any newspaperman who took a picture of the alleged murderess.

The threat to shoot was made as Sheriff Pease and Marion Mead were endeavoring to shield Mrs. Nott from the gaze of several hundred curious citizens, mostly women, who had joined the courthouse steps awaiting the opening of court.

Judge Malthie had previously threatened to fine photographers who took pictures in the courtroom.

The prosecution's star witness, John C. Johnston, was called early in the

FOUR HELD IN WOMAN'S DEATH

Stamford, Ct., May 27.—An unknown woman, between twenty-five and thirty of age, was killed and three others by a collision of two trucks early today. Four men aboard the trucks are held pending an investigation.

One of the trucks was a furniture van operated by Sol Cutler of No. 27 Academy street, Newark, N. J., and owned by the Modern Storage Company. With him was Louis Rubin of Silver Lake, N. J., and the woman whom Cutler says they had met as they were passing through Greenwich, going toward New Haven, after having asked them for a ride.

DEMANDS REMOVAL ON 32 CHARGES

Amazing and sensational charges against District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts of Middlesex are contained in a bill filed in the State Supreme Court by Attorney-General J. Weston Allen.

Allen charges Tufts with improper conduct of his office.

He demands his removal.

The case is without precedent in the history of Massachusetts.

It follows a feud of many months between Tufts and Allen, in which both have made charges and counter charges of "politics in office."

It will be tried, if it is tried, before the Massachusetts Supreme Court.

So unique is the action that Clerk Clarence H. Cooper had to borrow a capias to make out the form.

The action is in the form of an information under Chapter 231, Section 1, of the General Laws, which gives a majority of the justices of the Supreme Court power to remove a district attorney for cause.

There are thirty-two allegations, contained in many typewritten pages.

The nature of these allegations will

SLAYER OF WOMAN PAYS THE PENALTY

Wethersfield, Ct., May 27.—Praying for mercy, John Kaserauskas of Bridgeport paid the death penalty at the state prison this morning for the murder of Mrs. Joseph Chernake of Milford.

The crime for which Kaserauskas was hanged was one of the most brutish and inhuman imaginable. Mrs. Chernake was the wife of his friend and neighbor. Suspecting that the Chernakes had a small sum of money in the house, he visited the house during the absence of the husband and bludgeoned the woman with a cobbler's iron rod and then hacked her to death with an axe.

11 INFLAMMABLE STOVE POLISH SELLERS FINED

Lawrence, May 27.—To safeguard the public against the use of inflammable stove polish two Lawrence wholesale grocers, Louis and Samuel Freedman, were sentenced to serve ten days each in the House of Correction by Justice Wilfred E. Hovey in District Court. Upon appeal it was arranged that each may pay a fine of $100 instead of serving the jail sentence. Several smaller dealers in similar parts of the city paid fines ranging from $2 to $10.

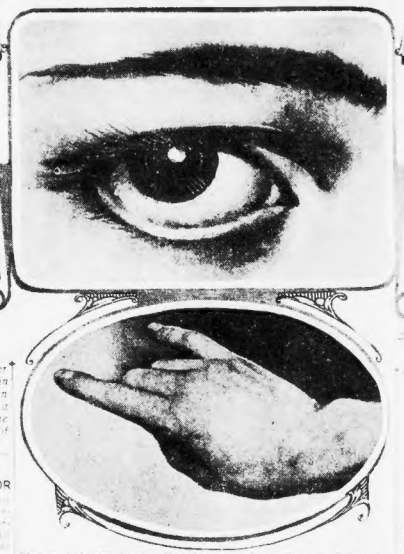
Strange Belief in "Evil Eye" Prevails in New York

M. Giovanni Giolitti, former Premier Minister of Italy, in whose regime sixteen statesmen associated with him died, as a result of which belief became rife that he was possessed of the "evil eye."



Shown at the top is one alleged type of the "evil eye." Below it a method of fixing their fingers which many superstitious foreigners believe, prevents the "evil eye" from casting its spell on a person. Many Italians, it is said, would not approach Premier Giolitti until they had "protected" themselves in this manner.

Enrico Caruso, noted tenor, now victim of internal catarrhs supposedly due to an "evil eye" spell on the singer.

Another Shipment Comes Just in Time

It's not strange that all the clamor for low prices on men's clothing has brought into the market a veritable flood of cheap goods to be sold to meet a price. But the really fine goods---the kind it takes time to turn out---are actually scarce.

These Kennedy Stores, however, stuck to their policy of Quality. We preferred, if necessary, to lose some business rather than lose our good name. Some makers, notably The House of Kuppenheimer, felt the same way about it.

But it turned out that many who demanded cheap goods found they didn't want them after all, and turned to us for the dependable, known quality merchandise they knew could always be found here at the lowest possible prices.

So we found it pretty hard to supply the demand for

Kuppenheimer Clothes at $35, $40, $45, $50

and other garments of similar character. As soon as we saw which way the tide was setting, we placed additional orders and our second shipment of choice goods for this season has just been received. Any man who knows and appreciates fine fabrics, correct style, high grade tailoring and big value for his money will find plenty to interest him here.

A broken heart is cheaper than a fractured pocketbook

He's a lucky boy, says ten thousand sergeants and even some chorus girl comes along and makes a monkey out of him

If he should happen to come back she do sn't want to be out of date

He knows his way with him, but while s sat bing the beauty chorus he sees no reason that he should throw the rest of his town off of it

If he knows she was living up to his new castles he'd probably want his rent in advance

He's funny how forty-four cents of steerage will change a woman's faith in a man

She sings at noon picnics, and whining and he serves in the city evenings and dining

Finally he remembers her name but then he can't think where he met her

On the whole though Wright showed himself as a greater golfer he certainly gave a more sustained exhibition than any of the Americans and is a greatly improved player over former years, one with a brilliant future ahead

Passing the tests following the open, Dureiu topped his drive and failed to reach the green on his second shot. Wright reached the green of this great two-shot hole in all sure fives was to take two more and gain a great lead. He missed his mark also with his second shot and was obliged to play a pitch to the banks of a fine strong approach putt. It took too much to do and he was certain to only getting a half, so he never put it to the test. Just failed to drop in

So don't blame the retailers around town who are charging all kinds of prices for the Quality that I am selling at $2.85. They're not profiteers they're simply victims of early buying. They bought at the top, I bought at the bottom. And my good fortune is yours.

As Kipling so aptly expressed it:

"They asked me how I did it
And I gave 'em the Scripture text:
'You keep your light so shining,
A little in front of the next.'
They copied all they could follow,
But they couldn't copy my mind,
And I left 'em sweating and stealing,
A year and a half behind."

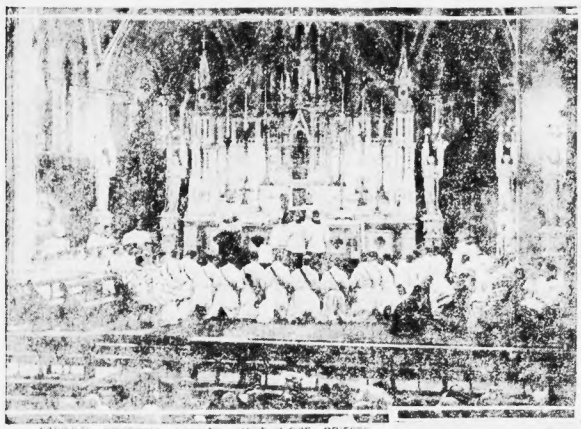
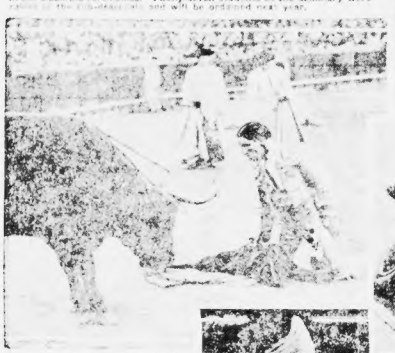
Solemnity Marks Ordaining of 21 Priests by Cardinal



CARDINAL O'CONNELL ORDAINS TWENTY-ONE PRIESTS. Impressive scene in the Holy Cross Cathedral yesterday as the head of the Roman Catholic Church in this city ordained twenty-one young men to the tremendous responsibilities and labors of the priesthood. Monsignor Peterson of the Brighton Seminary, of which the newly made priests were graduates, together with twenty-eight other priests, aided His Eminence in the elaborate ceremonies. Twenty-seven students at the seminary were also ordained deacons, and will be ordained next year.

HER DEMOCRATIC MARRIAGE. Princess Troubetskoy, known as the most beautiful Red Cross nurse in France, is seeking to divorce Captain Wallace Street Schultz, whom she married last April.



SOME SPEED. This motorcycle was going at the rate of 112 miles an hour when the camera clicked. The rider is Fred Ludlow, at the new Beverley Hills speedway, Los Angeles, breaking a record.

ONE WORLD MOVE AND THE BULL WON. Bullmaster one of the most famous of Spanish bull fighters, is here shown kneeling in front of an infuriated bull. This is one of the most dangerous of the stunts of the matadors.

MRS. EDITH KELLY GOULD. She is shown wearing one of the famous hats for which her former husband must pay 6,000 francs to a Paris modiste. Evidence showed Mrs. Gould ordered as many as twenty new hats a month, and Frank will have to pay for them all, under the direction of a French court, in spite of the fact that he is divorced now.

A FOREBUNNER OF JUNE. This exquisite bridal gown, turned out of the Claridge shop, is covered with crystal beads and has a long court train of filmy tulle and satin falling from the coronet of brilliants worn by the bride. It is one of the most effective bridal costumes seen in many years, say those who know. (Photo by Underwood and Underwood)

The Wild Goose

By Gouverneur Morris

This interesting story has been made into a stirring motion picture by Cosmopolitan Productions under the masterly direction of Albert Capellani.

CHAPTER XV.

FRANCIS MANNERS felt that he had played his last card and that his fate, both social and financial, definitely settled in the air of June. He was like a man who, having exhausted himself with frantic effort to save some fragile thing, to the ground, surveys it the building is doomed to and petulant fate remains deaf to the boy and upon the bosom of the sea.

He had a certain sense of relief. He had fought for the right. He had been beaten. He was sorry that wrong had prevailed, but he was glad that the war was over, and that the demobilization would soon be effected. He had taken every possible step to divorce Diana, and if she would not end them, let them end

It was not without a cynical feeling that he dwelt about the business he had undertaken. He had promised Diana to furnish her with the grounds upon which the State of New York a woman may divorce her husband. And for seven days following her arrested he occupied himself with this quixotic and depraved project.

Talked It Over

Sometimes he talked it over with Diana. He found perhaps that the gentleness of the business, the considerate, [illegible] of it, might soon at the eleventh hour turn her from her intentions. But if he engaged such a lure he did not succeed.

Now that she was sure of having her own way, Diana had grown [illegible] for her household duties. Francis must keep in mind that until some months after the decree [illegible] she would be as little connected as possible. In consequence Francis Manners saw a great deal of his own wife.

One day, when his plans for her benefit were more or less in shape, he said them before her. "Diana," he said, "you and I have great enjoyment in the third act until you have had the first act and the second act. It would do for me and a beautiful blonde to be found out of a clear sky. From now on I am going to neglect you and spend most of my time in town."

"I am going to neglect you so that people will notice it. I'll live at the apartment and I'll let people believe that after ten years' work and domestic worries I've declared a holiday. I'll preach the equality of the sexes. I'll maintain that a man has a right to his own life and to fulfill his own destiny."

"I wish you wouldn't be so sarcastic and bitter," said Diana.

Not Off-Hand

"I am not," he said. "I have managed to hide my bitter feelings and I take a certain mechanical amusement in those that remain in plain sight. That's all. I am trying to be practical. The most important thing is to see that your reputation comes through the divorce court immaculate. To achieve that you must be the one who starts at home and I must be the one who goes trailing."

"In short, I must seem to give you and Tom the one sort of deal that you have really given Tom and me. The thing can't be done officially. I've got to play around until I find a woman whom I might reasonably be conceived to think attractive, and who wouldn't in the least mind being [illegible] in a scandal."

"But if the whole thing is a fake?" objected Diana.

"It isn't a fake. Faking is too dangerous. If we play against the law and are found out you will never get your divorce in this state, and I might conceivably go to jail. I'm not going to cheat, Diana."

She made no remark.

"Does the play of it strike you? That the only pleasure I can give you is to be unfaithful to you?"

He clenched his hands till the knuckles were white, for the pity of it and the bitterness were very plain to him. Then he continued in an even, matter-of-fact voice.

"I'll let you know, of course, when it's time for you to hire a detective. And I shall give you some valuable hints as to my new habits."

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. Forbes

Why do the American people have such a bad opinion of Wall street and all that it stands for?

Is it because so many of them have gambled foolishly in stocks and had their fingers burned?

And is it because a great many others have been bamboozled by fake promoters and brokers operating from offices in the Wall street district?

Or, is Wall street itself largely to blame?

Do those who really belong to Wall street often do things calculated of make the public feel sore? Do they indulge often enough in market raids against outside purchasers of stocks? Are those in the know frequently guilty of utilizing information coming to them in course of their official connections with large corporations in such a way as to constitute getting a bad name?

If any answer all or a substantial majority of these questions in the affirmative, would that necessarily prove that Wall street is a den of thieves, that the business men who form the membership of the Stock Exchange are a lot of crooks, that the bankers who finance the railroads, industrials, public utilities and other enterprises needing the services of the investment bankers are a set of rascals, that the banks which lend money on collateral to speculators are a band of conspirators against the public welfare, that the whole Wall street institution would be much better off were it wiped out of existence?

Those who answer all questions as indicated above are in a hopeless minority. The overwhelming majority of the people realize that Wall street performs functions of great importance to the country as a whole. Without Wall street, without the New York Stock Exchange and other organized security markets, the business of financing railroads, industrials, public utilities and other enterprises needing the services of the investment bankers would be much more difficult than it is now. Without the organized security markets, the business of financing railroads, industrials, public utilities and other enterprises needing the services of the investment bankers would be much more difficult than it is now. British Chance for Service to the World

Embassy Hopes for Peace From Scrapping by Denouncing Treaty With Japan.

In the course of the next few weeks the government of Great Britain will have an admirable opportunity to demonstrate how much of sincerity there is in the constant protestations of extreme friendship for the United States that emanate so continually from its most eminent spokesmen.

For the treaty of mutual defence with Japan, which, on the surface at least, binds Great Britain to come to the aid of that highly militaristic Asiatic power in the event of a war, will expire in July. It is, in fact, only operative today by a sort of tacit consent, as its first prescribed term came to an end nearly a year ago, and it was automatically renewed only by the failure of either party to terminate it.

We shall all watch with interest to see whether this menacing treaty shall be formally renewed, or automatically renewed for a year as before, or properly denounced and abandoned.

For it is a menacing treaty, perhaps the international agreement which is most menacing to the peace of the world today.

It is a menace because it cannot but be a source of suspicion and distrust between the two most powerful nations—the United States and Great Britain—making it possible, as it does, for the militaristic Japanese Government to embroil them against the desire of their own peoples.

Among the great powers Japan alone is today controlled by an absolute autocracy. It alone is still dominated by the military ideal instinctive with autocracy. The democracies of the world, the constitutional monarchies as well, are crying for relief from military expenditures. No such cry arises from Japan. Her people are inarticulate, devoid of voice or power in the government. Her rulers are land hungry and yearning for world power. Democratic as are the British masses, the existence of this treaty makes it possible for them to be dragged again into war by a foreign military autocracy.

It is obvious that while this treaty exists there can be no real basis for the assertion that Great Britain desires closer bonds of unity with the United States than with any other nation. While it exists suggestions of mutual "naval holidays" or disarmament agreements between the two Anglo-Saxon nations are futile.

It would be arrant folly for this nation to enter into an agreement for the limitation of naval armaments while the Asiatic power at our Pacific door is building dreadnoughts and submarines and buying from Great Britain aerial warcraft at wartime speed.

If, however, the British Government is desirous of maintaining its entente with Japan, and at the same time rendering to peace a service in place of a threat, it might make the rigid limitation of Japan's armament, afloat and ashore, a condition of the renewal of the treaty next month.

Such action would unquestionably be in accord with the wishes of Americans, the needs of England and the interests of Japan.

Coolidge on Cost of Taking Over the Railroads

We grieve to read a statement, alleged to have come from the mouth of Vice-President Coolidge, concerning the railroad question.

One of our newspapers publishes an interview with him, in which he pictures the wretched condition of the railroads today. In the course of drawing this picture, he is led to consider the alternatives, and is quoted as declaring that it would cost our government as much to acquire the American railroads as it would cost to pay off the war debts. Now, it is scarcely believable that Vice-President Coolidge made a statement so ridiculous, because it is not conceivable that he does not know any better, and it is not conceivable that if he did know better he would misrepresent so flagrantly, and yet the gentleman who took the interview is an intelligent and reputable journalist.

It must be a misunderstanding, or it may have been that Mr. Coolidge, in the prejudice of a man who has been brought up in the Winthrop Murray Crane school of politics against public ownership and operation of anything that big business wants to exploit, allowed himself without thinking, to use figures in the way that has brought them into so much contempt and has somewhat justified the old saying that there were three kinds of liars, of whom the worst is statistics.

Technically, Governor Coolidge might justify this statement, but practically, which is the only consideration worth discussing, there is not a modicum of justification for it. If we acquired our railroads, it would not cost the American people a penny, it would merely be a transference of certificates. Stockholders and bondholders of the railroads would become government bondholders and the government would become entitled to the revenues of the road.

Now, Vice-President Coolidge knows that the railroads are bankrupt and that the stockholders and even some of the bondholders must be wiped out or the government must intervene, either by taking the roads or by giving them subsidies. He knows, or ought to know, that the American people would never tolerate the continued giving of subsidies to the railroads, operated by their old private managers, with their sixty years' history of mismanagement, which has included every form of error, moral and intellectual.

To Stop Whiskey Poisoning

Make It Dangerous for the Poisoners

Whoever is guilty of an act that he knows may kill another is guilty of murder or manslaughter.

Hundreds of thousands are selling poisonous whiskey in this country now because it is profitable and THEY ARE NOT AFRAID OF THE CONSEQUENCES.

Murder and robbery are also profitable, and hundreds of thousands would commit those crimes if they were not afraid.

A man knows that if he commits murder for profit he will be executed, and if he commits robbery for profit he will be jailed. That makes him hesitate.

When he knows the same about SELLING WHISKEY, there will be fewer whiskey sellers and fewer whiskey deaths.

When death results from whiskey drinking, find the man or men that sold the whiskey, lock them up, put them on trial for homicide, jail them for terms from ten years upward, and you will discourage profitable whiskey poisoning.

God's Steward

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

TO you who pray by night and day
That wealth may be your share
And give no place to God's good grace
I say beware, beware!

The fattened purse can bless or curse,
And this we know full well,
Gold paves the street for idle feet
And speeds them fast to Hell.

For Hell is not that final spot
That waits for sin's redress,
It is the sphere all souls find here
Who dwell in selfishness.

Nor, hoofed and horned, by mortals scorned,
Do devils skulk below,
But crowned with pelf and love of self,
Purse proud, through earth they go.

They beggar toil, they seize the soil
(God's gift to one and all)
They sing loud psalms and scatter alms
That blight where'er they fall.

With greedy lust and might of trust
They take the laborer's bread,
Nor understand his lifted hand
When offered alms instead.

The thirst for gain blunts heart and brain;
The gold-mad mind is cursed.
Oh, you who pray for wealth to-day,
Seek God's large wisdom first.

No mortal mind alone can find
The gold-paved path to right.
With reverent mien, ask Powers unseen
To lead with love's great light.

Dear K. C. B.—Why not a column about the Dempsey-Carpentier contest? Everyone else who writes for the papers has given expression to his views on this great international event, and why not you? I am hoping that some one will write something that will make it possible for me to attend without the loss of too much self-respect. I am a woman. Perhaps you will do this for me. Softly, it is.

MY DEAR Emily.
I CRY at plays.
AND MOTION pictures.
AND I pick flowers.
AND CAN mind babies.
AND I hate men.
WHO TAKE advantage
OF THE fighting instincts
OF GAME cocks.
AND OF dogs.
BUT, EMILY.
IF I had a ticket.
FOR THE big fight.
AND I will have one.
AND I couldn't get there.
EXCEPT BY walking.
A SCORE of miles.
ON DUSTY roads.
IN HOT July.
I'M TELLING you, Emily.
THAT WHEN the bell rang.
I'D BE there.

IN MY ringside seat.
BECAUSE ALWAYS.
I NEVER have cared.
WHAT TWO men.
WHO ARE physically trained.
AND SANE.
EVER DID to each other.
IN A prize ring.
AND ABOUT the contest.
FOR NEXT July.
ALL I want.
IS TO see the soldier.
KNOCK THE block.
OFF THE shipyard worker.
AND IF I were you.
AND I wanted to go.
I'D GO.
THOUGH I will confess.
IF YOU were my friend.
IT WOULD grieve me much.
IF YOU wanted to go.

WHY BLAME MAN WHEN LOVE HAS WANED?

By Beatrice Fairfax.

WHEN a man and a woman go out to dinner together, they fade out, don't they?" demanded the Cynic. "And when they take a walk or dance they stay and come either don't they? So why don't a lot of us emphasize more or any part of love affair pretty much a 50-50 arrangement?"

It takes two to a business contract—an agreement between two people, both aware. But when it comes to love many women seem to think that the man should do all the giving and the woman all the receiving. Whether giving goes and a man woman does some of the time it is passionately expressed by men, and it is the mother who is ready to feel that the other man is a woman.

Fought for Place

We would have fought for our place in the business world. We have proved that we could do men's work. We have proved that we could do it as well as men. We have proved that we could do it better than men. We have proved that we could do it better than men. We have proved that we could do it better than men. We have proved that we could do it better than men.

Woman Knows It

It is time to recognize the fact that a woman knows it. She knows it. She knows it. She
